

Disclosing your epilepsy – to get the job done!

Disclosing your epilepsy diagnosis in the workplace

Disclosing your epilepsy – to get the job done!

Every person with epilepsy must choose whether to disclose their diagnosis to their employer and co-workers. Some of the most influencing factors will be whether you need workplace adjustments at your job and whether your co-workers will need to provide support to you, should you have a seizure in the workplace. This disclosure guide aims to help you decide what will work best for you.

First, identify a NEED for disclosure. Consider your answers and decide whether you have a reason to disclose. Remember, if you choose to disclose your epilepsy there are discrimination laws that protect you.

If you decide that disclosure will help you in your job, consider WHEN to disclose. Then decide HOW to disclose.

Effective disclosure can establish a positive working relationship with your employer and co-workers.

- 1 Determine the NEED for disclosure
- 2 Decide WHEN to disclose
- 3 Choose HOW to disclose

1

Determine the NEED for disclosure: gather all the facts

Answer the following questions. A 'yes' answer in any of the yellow boxes may indicate a need to or benefit from disclosure. 'No' may indicate a need for more preparation.

Aspect	Questions	Answer
Job	Has the company participated in any disability related recruitment programs?	<input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
Job role	Have I requested a detailed job description for the position?	<input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
	Do I know what the essential functions and expectations of the job are?	<input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
	Does the job role indicate any risks where I or others could be injured?	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
	Will I need workplace adjustments (eg. lighting, later start in the mornings)?	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
	Does my epilepsy potentially impact on the health and safety of workmates or the public?	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
My boss	Does your boss use a flexible and personal management style?	<input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
	Can I provide my boss with additional information about epilepsy at work?	<input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
Myself	Am I familiar with my rights related to discrimination laws?*	<input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
	Am I comfortable about my epilepsy—have I educated myself about my condition?	<input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
	Am I aware of my strengths and functional limitations?	<input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
	Will I need potential first aid assistance in the workplace?	<input checked="" type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
	Have I explored strategies to self manage my epilepsy?	<input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No
	Have I practised disclosure with a family member, close friend or career professional?	<input type="checkbox"/> Yes <input type="checkbox"/> No

*How can the Disability Discrimination Legal Service support you?

Provides free phone advice and consultations about discrimination law

Workplace discrimination education

Representation at legal mediation

2

Decide WHEN to disclose: consider the pros and cons

When	Potential gains	Potential setbacks
In a resume or on a job application	Establishes “up front” relationship and communication	Employer may have stereotypes about epilepsy and may not offer you an interview—you may simply not get a call back
Before the interview	Shows respect to employer, gives employer time to research, to ask appropriate questions or refresh their knowledge on discrimination acts	Employer had advance time to yield to his or her stereotypes about epilepsy—will they see you first, or your epilepsy diagnosis first?
During the interview	Opportunity to read employer body language, to time the disclosure and to disclose in a brief, positive manner	Employer may feel uneasy and ill prepared to respond with appropriate and legal questions
After the job offer	There is time for the employer to make reasonable workplace adjustments before the job starts	Employer may feel that you have been dishonest in the application process, which may erode trust
After the job begins	Gives opportunity to establish credibility before disclosure. Gives freedom to talk with co-workers about epilepsy related issues	May take time to arrange requested workplace adjustments. Employer may believe you have not been honest which may affect your relationship
When performance issues arise	Employer may be more understanding of work difficulties	Employer may have difficulty changing his or her perceptions of your work performance, feel betrayed, or wonder why you waited so long
Never	Your epilepsy information is kept private	You don’t give your workplace an opportunity to understand or support you. In order for reasonable workplace adjustments to be made, you need to discuss the issues

The Epilepsy Foundation can support you:

- In working through this resource
- Referral to relevant organisations where you may be better assisted by another service
- Provide workplace epilepsy training to manager and workers
- Support in better understanding your epilepsy and managing your employment

3

Choose HOW to disclose: some ideas

Considerations	Example
Disclosing to your supervisor is one thing (you expect this to remain confidential) —disclosing to your workmates is another and you should be the one who controls how and when your epilepsy (if ever) comes into the conversation. It is often a good idea to allow workplace relationships to get started before you reveal that you have epilepsy. Wearing epilepsy on your sleeve and just blurting it out on the first day on the job for many may not be the best way. Refer to the resource, Epilepsy: who & how to tell by Robert Mittan in 'The Epilepsy Report, May 2010).	“Since we will be working closely together, I would like you to know I have a medical condition you might help with ...” “There is something I would like you to know about me. There is a possibility that I might have a seizure while on the job. Hopefully it won't happen, but if it does I could use your help ...” “I have a common medical condition I would like you to know about ...”
Face employer concerns by talking about your compensatory strategies.	“I use an ipad to keep a list of tasks that I need to do so I don't forget tasks at work—it's really effective and works really well for me” (example for person who's memory has been effected due to their epilepsy)
Use general, functional terms to briefly explain the impact of your epilepsy on the job; avoid technical, medical diagnoses—always offer a strategy that will enable you to do the job.	“I notice a lot of the team meetings start at 8.30am. Due to my epilepsy, especially if I've had a seizure during the night, I can be very tired. In my previous role I was able to start a little later at 9.30am. Could we move the meeting times to 9.30am so that I don't miss out—I really value being part of a team and feel uncomfortable coming into the meeting at the end, when other people then suspect I've had a seizure—I really do want to contribute”
In a private setting, remind your employer about your right to privacy	After disclosing your epilepsy in your employer's office: “Thank you in advance for keeping this information confidential”
Frame any difficulties around how you work best	“I have noticed that I am having difficulty in completing my work tasks. I have a medical condition that requires frequent breaks in order to do my work. Would you allow me to work later to enable me to take more breaks? I always get the job done

Summarise your situation to help you make your disclosure decision:

YES
I will disclose

1

List the reasons why you NEED to disclose

2

WHEN will you disclose your epilepsy?

List the reasons for choosing this time

3

HOW will you disclose your epilepsy?

Write a few phrases telling your employer about your epilepsy

Practise your disclosure with another person

NO
I will not disclose

List the reasons why you choose not to disclose

For each new job, review the information in this brochure to determine whether or not to disclose

Special thanks to Virginia Commonwealth University Rehabilitation Research and Training Centre, USA for granting permission to adapt their resource in the development of this booklet.
www.worksupport.com

This publication was produced in partnership with the Disability Discrimination Legal Service.

For more information or support, please contact the Epilepsy Foundation.

Epilepsy Foundation
587 Canterbury Road, Surrey Hills, VIC 3127, Australia
Telephone: (03) 8809 0600

The contents of this publication including all text, graphics, logos and images are protected by Australian copyright laws. Copyright of the Epilepsy Foundation's materials belongs to the Epilepsy Foundation. Other than for the purposes of and subject to the conditions prescribed under the Copyright Act 1968, no part of this publication may, in any form or by any means, be reproduced, stored in a retrieved system or transmitted without the prior written permission of the Epilepsy Foundation.

The information contained in this publication provides general information about epilepsy. It does not provide specific advice. Specific health and medical advice should always be obtained from a qualified health professional.

The images in this publication show models who do not necessarily have an epilepsy diagnosis and are for illustrative purposes only.

© Epilepsy Foundation, June 2016